

Wesley:

Well before I joined the Old School Project I had always been taught by my parents to respect your elderly and that's what I've always done. Um, I started off as a young person being told by my Dad to help old people cross the road because they're less able than us. But then as I started to get older, more intimidating, um older people sort of shrugged their shoulders and walked off so I stopped doing it so, yeah that was my impression of um, that they didn't like me so I just left um how they was.