

Living in a globalised world

Economic aspirations

Armando Hernandez, Migrant (Speaking in Mexican – subtitles):

I am from Honduras. I have trekked through jungles and crossed lakes. I have walked day and night without rest, sometimes without food. It is a very hard journey. I don't know when I'm going to start this journey because many of my countrymen have broken their legs or arms trying to jump the train. I arrived here okay but the situation in my country is very poor. We are separated from our families and we miss them. They worry about us and I miss them greatly. We are trying to make a better future for our families so that they do not suffer so much.
