

Living in a globalised world

Saving the American way of life

Narrator:

Mike King and Jerry Deebauch are part of Spencer's crusade to save the American way of life. They have designed and built an unmanned plane to locate migrants who are attempting to cross to the United States.

Jerry Deebauch:

I don't want you to get that I go round chasing Mexicans down with guns, because I don't. We're not vigilantes like this. This is the wild Wild West out here. We have bears, mountain lions, coyote's, snakes, drug smugglers.

Mike King:

Two legged Coyotes.

Jerry Deebauch:

Yes. Talk about living life by the seat of your pants, man.

Jerry Deebauch:

When you live in Connecticut or New York or places like that, you see them. You see illegal's everywhere. But you don't know it. Down here, not only do you see them, but you see them walking into the country.

Narrator

The plane's on-board camera can send pictures directly to the World Wide Web. They want to alert fellow Americans to a perceived threat to their way of life.

Jerry Deebauch:

Its effective system that we've put together to do that. I wrote all the.. I'm the software guru. I'm the nerd. I don't look like a nerd.

Narrator:

Groups like the American border patrol may represent an extreme form of American Nationalism, but they feel they have to take responsibility for ensuring that the United States does not change its culture and identity.