

Technology, networks and international order

Technology, networks and international order

How have technological change and the rise in organised networks affected international order? William Brown, Senior Lecturer in Government and Politics, is joined by fellow Open University lecturers Dr Simon Bromley and Dr Helen Yanacopulos to investigate the key issues through recent events such as the 'Jubilee 2000 debt campaign' and the financial crisis of 2008, along with a look at traditional political ideals such as Marxism and Capitalism. This material forms part of the Open University course DU301 A world of whose making?