

Croeso: beginners' Welsh

Introduction

Welcome to this series of recordings taken from the Open University beginners' module in Welsh, "Croeso". The series begins with a piece almost entirely in English in which Jen Llewelyn speaks about her own experience of taking up the challenge to learn Welsh in a year. You will then hear a range of speakers talking about their home, work, leisure activities, views and future plans. Finally, you'll hear about a 19th-century Welshman, John Williams.

See how much you can understand just by listening first of all. You don't need to understand every word – just try to pick out the main points in each recording. If you need some extra help, you can also download a transcript of each recording to help you.
