

The Final Cut

Cropping and Resizing

Cropping and resizing are very useful tools, they can be used to either emphasise an element within a particular frame or just to remove something that you don't want somebody to see. This short section shows the use of various different aspects that we've been talking about. Resizing; all of these three shots would have been images that filled the screen. So while the two on the left hand side have just been resized down, the one on the right will have been cropped because in order to fill the full height of the screen you would have had to have cropped off the left hand half of it. Or you could decide you want the left hand side of the screen and so move it away so you don't have the right hand side. But what this also allows you to do is show three simultaneous pieces of action at the same time.
