

Environment

Bottling the water

Narrator: The water bottling plant at Port Baikal is a good example of the potential for more sustainable forms of development. Confidence in the quality of water in lake Baikal makes it an economic proposition to extract it, bottle it, and sell it as a high value product.

The bottling plant provides employment for local people, and achieves economic goals without harming the environment.